

Syndication & Use of Articles

Thank you for your interest in Suburban Steader.

Please feel free to share any article or information from our website in part (100 word maximum) as long as credit is given to Dan at Suburban Steader and including a link to this website and the following attribution bio. Note that changes to the article as written, including its links, is strictly prohibited unless permission is received in advance.

Dan started Suburban Steader as a way to provide suburbanites with the confidence and know-how to become more self-reliant. He also wanted to document his journey down the suburban homesteading and prepping path – sharing his knowledge, successes and failures along the way. On Suburban Steader you will find homesteading and preparedness information, instruction and discussion that will lead you to a more self-reliant lifestyle.

To read more from Dan, visit his website, Suburban Steader. You can also follow Dan on Facebook, Twitter, Google+ and Pinterest.

Any information that appears on www.suburbansteader.com and carries my copyright can may not be sold, distributed for profit, or used as marketing material for any third-party products.

As always, feel to email me at Dan AT SuburbanSteaders DOT com for additional information.